President Barzani asks US Congressional delegation to promote economic ties

Erbil, Kurdistan - Iraq (KRG.org) - President Masoud Barzani on Friday in Salahaddin met a delegation from the US Congress to discuss political developments in Iraq, bilateral relations, and the question of America's military presence in Iraq. He also thanked them for encouraging the US Government to open an American consulate in Erbil in the near future.

The visit by the members of Congress to the Kurdistan Region was part of their larger visit to Iraq to discuss and witness firsthand the security, political and economic developments. The delegation was headed by Congressman Dana Rohrabacher, who is also a member of the Kurdish-American Congressional Caucus.

Mr. Rohrabacher commended President Barzani for his role in establishing and building democracy in both the Kurdistan Region and Iraq as a whole. He said, "The Kurdistan Region started its democratic process in 1991 after the end of the first Gulf War. As a result the Region serves as a great example of democratic and economic success not only to the rest of Iraq, but to the Middle East region as a whole."

The delegation paid tribute to the political and economic progress in the Kurdistan Region and restated their commitment to continue to support the people. The delegation were particularly impressed with the security situation and hoped that the rest of Iraq will follow the same model, where Iraqis of different ethnicities and sects can co-exist together peacefully.

President Barzani thanked the delegation for their visit and said that continuing visits by members of the American Congress were very important in increasing understanding. He said, "Thanks to your efforts, the planned US consulate will soon be officially opened in Erbil. On behalf of the people of the Kurdistan Region, I would like to thank the American people for their great sacrifices in liberating the people of the Kurdistan Region from tyranny and dictatorship. Our people will never forget that."

The President also thanked Congressman Rohrabacher and his colleagues for being instrumental in passing a Congressional Resolution last year requesting a US consulate in Kurdistan, which is scheduled to open in the near future. The two sides also discussed the US-Iraq Status of Forces Agreement which stipulates that all American troops should leave Iraq by 31 December 2011.

In addition, President Barzani spoke of the importance of bilateral economic co-operation and of more American companies investing in the Kurdistan Region and Iraq. Despite the prominent role played by the US Government in the fall of Saddam's regime, American companies can still be more active in the Region through greater investment.

The bipartisan delegation included Russ Carnahan, Louise Gohmert, Jim Costa, Ted Poe and Jeff Duncan. Four of the six visiting members of Congress are also members of the Kurdish-American Congressional Caucus. Present at the meeting with President Barzani were Dr Fuad Hussein, Chief of Staff to the President; the Head of the KRG's Department of Foreign Relations, Minister Falah Mustafa Bakir; Paul Berkowitz and Alan Makovsky, senior staff members of the US House Committee on Foreign Affairs; and

KRG Representative Urges Greater Economic Partnership with US Companies

New York - USA (KRG.org) - The Kurdistan Region in Iraq continues to grow and strengthen economically and remains a prime opportunity for investors to find a profitable home in the Middle East, Qubad Talabani, the KRG's Representative to the United States, told investors in Manhattan yesterday.

Addressing an audience at the 10th annual hedge fund symposium sponsored by Institutional Investor, Mr. Talabani said, "The Kurdistan Region is the place where those seeking to invest - from some of our newest friends like the Koreans to neighbors like Turkey - find our new economy vibrant, promising and full of opportunity."

Mr. Talabani noted that while there has been significant progress, Kurds expect more progress and continued growth. "We have progressed beyond the humanitarian development of the 1990's and are now utilizing our vast human and natural resources to take our economic development to a higher level," he added.

While lauding the strengthened partnership between the KRG and US-based oil companies, Mr. Talabani said, "I know that the US has more to offer than expertise in oil and gas. Kurds would like to see more Americans, from other sectors, particularly the financial services sector, partner with us as we develop our infrastructure."

Mr. Talabani informed the audience that energy production, tourism and IT services remain key opportunities for economic growth in Kurdistan. "Not only will our emerging private sector require IT services, but I strongly believe that Kurdistan -- with its unique geographic location, neighboring Arabic, Persian and Turkish-speaking countries, and with its large and mostly young, multilingual and educated population -- can serve as an exciting hub for IT development and IT services in the future," Mr. Talabani said.

Highlighting the recent progress between the Federal and Regional governments regarding oil exports and payments, Mr. Talabani urged investors to join in the Kurdistan Region's economic growth. "2011 looms to be a year of change in the Middle East, and Kurdistan is way ahead of the game," he said.

U.S. Consulate General opens in Erbil

Erbil, Kurdistan – Iraq (KRG.org) – US Deputy Secretary of State Thomas Nides yesterday opened the United States Consulate General in Erbil. He was joined at the ceremony by Kurdistan Region President Masoud Barzani, Prime Minister Barham Salih, Speaker of Parliament Dr Kamal Kirkuki and other KRG and American senior officials.

The solid relationship that the Kurdistan Region has maintained with the US for more than two decades was reaffirmed at the event to celebrate the 235th anniversary of US independence and to officially upgrade the US Regional Reconstruction Team (RRT) office in the Region's capital to a full US Consulate General.

Welcoming the participants, the newly promoted US Consul General Alexander Laskaris, said, "Today is a milestone in the history of American diplomacy as we open for the first time a consulate general in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq."

Following renditions of the Iraqi, Kurdish, and United States' national anthems by the US 4th Infantry Division band, Deputy Secretary of State Nides stated, "This is a culmination of a 20 year friendship; one that was forged in the hardship of the first Gulf War; one that continued through the liberation of Iraq from Saddam Hussein and all the difficulties that followed, and one that is thriving today."

The Deputy Secretary, paraphrasing US Secretary of State Clinton, went on to say, "What is happening today in Egypt and Tunisia has happened in Iraq: People reclaiming their future and building democratic institutions. And what has happened in the rest of Iraq began even earlier in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region."

The Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) has long partnered with the US to promote freedom and democracy in Iraq. From the first days of the US-led operation to liberate Iraq, the government and people of the Kurdistan Region have supported the US in this endeavour. The Peshmerga forces have worked together with the US military and the KRG has provided assistance to the coalition throughout the years.

Commenting on this partnership, President Barzani said, "Today is a culmination of the relations that have existed for many years, a relationship in which we have fought and shed blood together for the sake of the liberation of Iraq."

Highlighting ideological similarities, the President went on to say, "We share a number of values with the people of the United States; among these are: a strong belief in democracy, strong belief in accepting others in peaceful coexistence, and individual and public freedoms." President Barzani also thanked the US and its allies for their protection and support throughout the years.

The US played a key role in providing an environment where the values of freedom and democracy could flourish amongst the citizens of the Kurdistan Region. Following UN Security Council Resolution 688 in 1991, the US helped lead an effort by the international community to intervene during Saddam's brutal reprisals following the Kurdish uprisings of the first Gulf War. The US helped enforce a no-fly zone to prevent Saddam's helicopter gunships from killing hundreds of thousands of fleeing citizens, and they maintained this protection for the next 12 years until coalition forces accomplished the full liberation of the country.

Looking toward the future, the US Ambassador to Iraq James Jeffrey addressed the assembly and said, "To all the people of Iraq, the United States pledges its continued support for a unified, democratic, pluralistic, and federal Iraq, and we honour your grave losses among your civilian population and security forces in our common struggle against terror."

Mr. Nides also thanked the KRG for donating the land for a permanent consulate general, affirming, "Through this generous action the KRG has again proven itself to be an outstanding partner." He concluded, "On behalf of President Obama and Secretary Clinton, you can count on our friendship."

Following the speeches President Barzani and Deputy Secretary Nides unveiled the seal, officially opening the new consulate general.

Commenting on the proceedings, the Head of the KRG's Head of Foreign Relations, Minister Falah Mustafa Bakir, said, "This is an important day. It is a significant step forward in cementing the existing relations between the Kurdistan Region and the United States of America, and it prepares the way for a strategic partnership. We look forward to fully coordinating and cooperating with the US Consulate General on political, economic, cultural, and business matters, and we embrace this significant opportunity to further develop a two-way, mutually beneficial relationship with the United States."

In addition to the opening of the new Consulate, officials also announced that a five star 200 room Erbil Marriott, 75 deluxe Marriott Executive Apartments and several restaurants would be opening as part of the Empire Iraq development project in Erbil. The hotel, apartments and restaurants will be among the first major US brands to open establishments in Iraq. The buildings are currently under construction and are scheduled to open in 2014.

Also attending the event were: Iraq's First Lady Hero Talabani, the Head of the Legal Department at the Iraqi Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA) Ambassador Arshad Tawfiq, the Head of the MOFA's Consular Department Ambassador Ismat Ageed, US Lieutenant General Frank Helmick, US Brigadier General James Pasquarette, KRG Ministers, KRG Members of Parliament, political party leaders, members of the Erbil diplomatic and consular corps, religious and civil society leaders, and many others.

Subject: Holiday Tourism Soars in Kurdistan

Holiday tourism soars in Kurdistan

Erbil, Iraqi Kurdistan - Iraqi Arabs celebrating the end of Ramadan flocked to Kurdistan, which enjoyed a jump in holiday tourism thanks to soaring temperatures in other provinces and continued instability in Syria and Iraq.

The skyrocketing demand for hotels over Eid was an indication of the region's potential for growth, analysts said.

According to statistics obtained by Rudaw, during the three days of the Eid of Ramadan, more than 150,000 tourists visited Kurdistan's three cities. The numbers were up 53 percent over last year.

According to tourism officials, Iraqi Kurdistan's 25,000-person room capacity - the region has 350 hotels, 112 motels and 41 resort villages - was under enormous pressure during Eid earlier this month. Thousands of tourists had to spend their nights in their cars, mosques or on the streets, and 700 tents were erected for tourists in parks, said Herish Ahmad, head of the Hotels and Restaurants Union in the Kurdistan Region.

"We also asked hotel owners to accommodate as many tourists possible," he said. "For example, if a hotel's capacity was 100 people they pushed to accommodate 150 people."

Ahmad said that while the region has built many new hotels over the past two years, the number of tourists during Eid was unexpected and unprecedented. He dismissed claims that hotel owners exploited the situation by charging exorbitant prices during the holiday, arguing that some hotels did not charge lower-income tourists taxes or food in honor of the Islamic holiday.

Sami Ahmad from volatile Diyala province said he had hoped to spend a week in Erbil, but due to a sudden spike in hotel prices he cut his trip short by three days.

Still, Ahmad called Erbil "a beautiful and safe city. People are very nice and the resorts are very attractive."

Abu Alla, who traveled with Ahmad, said hotel owners had raised prices during the holiday.

"Just three weeks before Eid I paid US$80 for the same room, but now we paid almost US$170," he said.

Dawd Suleiman, professor at the Sulaimani Institute of Tourism, argued that Kurdistan's tourism market has room to grow. He said the region needs to advertise on Arabic satellite channels along with building high quality, moderately priced accommodation and restaurants.

According to Mawlawy Jabar, head of Kurdistan's tourism department, last year each tourist spent at least US$150 during the three-day Eid holiday. He expects the numbers to rise this year.

Jabar said Kurdistan is a free market economy and hotels decide their prices based on the quality of their services.

In the mountainous resort town of Shaqlawa outside of Erbil, some homeowners, including Nawzad Jamal and his two cousins, also decided to take advantage of the room shortage by renting out their homes.

"There were many tourists in Shaqlawa," he said. "It was an opportunity to make some money."

According to Shaqlawa's tourism office, there are only nine hotels and 18 motels in the town, which is enough to accommodate less than 10 percent of the tourists that visit Shaqlawa each year. To solve the problem, they have given Shaqlawa residents permission to rent their homes to tourists.

Jamal said that he and his cousins made around US$3,600 during the three-day Eid.

Mustafa Hussein, an Arab tourist who visited Shqlawa with his family of five, paid US$100 per night for one room.

"Shaqlawa is nicer than most of the Arab countries and has beautiful weather, but the lack of hotels have hurt this place," he said.

According to the Shaqlawa tourism department, of the 90,000 tourists who visited Erbil province this year, 80,000 visited Shaqlawa. However, due to the lack of hotels most could not spend more than a day there.

California state senators explore progress of the Kurdistan Region

Erbil, Kurdistan – Iraq (KRG.org) – A delegation of six California state senators visited Kurdistan last week to see what progress has been achieved in the Region since the 2003 liberation of Iraq and to gain an understanding of the likely affects of the US troop withdrawal that is scheduled for the end of this year.

The delegation, made up of state senators from both the Democratic and Republican parties, came to Kurdistan as part of a trip to the wider region.

President Masoud Barzani received the senators and talked with them about developments after the spring uprisings of 1991 which were followed by democratic elections, the formation of the Kurdistan Parliament and the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG), and significant improvements in the Region's institutions, infrastructure and economy.

Members of the delegation expressed interest in Kurdistan's democratic system of governance and asked President Barzani to share his views on events in the border areas as well as the recent tensions between Erbil and Baghdad.

The California senators also met with Erbil Governor Nawzad Hadi to discuss the city's remarkable economic growth over the past eight years, and met with the Minister of Trade and Industry Sinan Chalabi to discuss potential opportunities for California businesses in the Kurdistan Region.

In his meeting with the six senators, the Head of the Department of Foreign Relations, Minister Falah Mustafa Bakir, expressed his appreciation of the United States' recent decision to upgrade its regional office to a full Consulate General and his hope that the Consulate will help to significantly increase the presence of US businesses in the Region.

A number of the senators, who serve as chairs on committees for business, industry, transportation and economic development, discussed Regional development related to their areas of expertise, and they said that Californian companies are ready to assist in a number of sectors in order to help continue rebuilding the Region.

The delegation also commended the bravery of the people and leadership of the Kurdistan Region in upholding and defending democratic rights, the tolerance of other ethnicities and religions and the rule of law.

The delegation was led by the Chair of the Senate Committee on Environmental Quality Joseph Simitian, and included: The Senate Majority Floor Leader Ellen Cobbett, the Chair of the Senate Committee on Transportation and Housing Mark DeSaulnier, the Chair of the Senate Republican Caucus Bob Huff, the Chair of the Senate Committee on Labour and Industrial Relations Ted W. Liue, and the Chair of the Senate Committee on Business, Professions and Economic Development Curren D. Price.

Healthcare exhibition to open in Erbil, Iraq allocates six billion dollars to health

Erbil, Kurdistan - Iraq - The Kurdistan Regional Government's Minister for Health yesterday spoke at a press conference announcing the forthcoming opening of Iraq Medicare 2011, a major international healthcare exhibition in Erbil and the only trade show of its kind in Iraq.

Iraq Medicare 2011, the 2nd International Total Healthcare Exhibition Serving Iraq, is organised by International fairs and Promotions (IFP) and takes place from 4th to 6th October, under the patronage of the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) Ministry of Health.

The press conference to announce the exhibition was attended by Health Minister Taher Hawrami and M. Fadi Darwish, IFP Iraq Manager.

In his speech, Mr Darwish gave an overview of the current conditions of Iraq's healthcare sector and the ongoing efforts by various concerned parties to improve the quality of medical services, highlighting the role of the exhibition towards that purpose. After thanking the attendees and the exhibition's supporters and sponsors, he added "The healthcare sector has grown tremendously in the past short period and is still expected to witness sizeable growth in coming years, taking advantage of several factors including government spending, as well as local and foreign investments. However, providing the technical and logistic facilities is still the most important driver for growth in the sector; it goes without saying that the more modern facilities are available, the greater the growth registered."

Darwish then said "It is from this vantage point that we are organizing 'Iraq Medicare 2011' for the second year in a row, building on the huge turnout and official satisfaction during the show's first edition last year. The show's aim is to offer government officials and investors the latest equipment and technologies available in global markets to improve the quality of medical services in the Kurdistan Region and all other Iraqi provinces."

The latest strategic five-year-plan by the Iraqi Ministry of Health had included a number of vital targets that included raising the quality standards of medical services in health institutions, securing medical supplies, developing medical centers across Iraq, improving first-aid and emergency services, and other practical aspects in public healthcare. The budget allocated to that plan is estimated at over US$ 6 billion and is accompanied by considerable growth in the pharmaceuticals sector, expected to be worth US$ 1 billion within the next 2-3 years.

In line with these stated goals and objectives, "Iraq Medicare 2011" will include a very wide selection of healthcare equipment and products, together with various medical services and solutions, to cover the needs of hospitals, specialist clinics, laboratories and other medical facilities. Visitors will include experts and professionals in the medical field, and will have the chance to discover a large number of modern medical services and technologies introduced for the first time in the Iraqi market, as well as several related services such as insurance programs, physiotherapy programs and many others showcased by more than 150 exhibiting companies from around 15 participating countries.

In terms of international presence, Mr Darwish said: "The show has grown by 40% compared to last year's edition, thanks to the participation of more than 150 companies from 15 countries, thus establishing itself as the single largest event specialized in the healthcare sector across Iraq and benefiting from the support of several trade associations and ministries from the countries represented such as Brazil, Turkey, Iran and others, not to mention the official support by the Kurdistan Regional Government and the Iraqi Central Government."

The show will also constitute an ideal occasion to stay up-to-date with the rapid evolution of Iraq's healthcare sector, where experts and professionals, including doctors, laboratory technicians, directors of hospitals and medical centers, as well as medical equipment distributors, will be able to keep track of future government initiatives in the sector by networking with officials and decision-makers looking for the best solutions and the newest technologies and services. In addition, the show offers important trade opportunities for international companies seeking to penetrate the Iraqi market through local agents, distributors and companies.

In closing, Mr Darwish invited all professionals of the health sector in Iraq and neighboring countries to visit the show, highlighting its importance and describing it as "a growing pulse in healthcare opportunities".

Erbil to host Iraq's largest international trade fair for 7th year

Erbil, Kurdistan – Iraq (KRG.org) – Erbil, capital of the Kurdistan Region, will this month host Iraq's largest international trade fair for the seventh consecutive year. More than 850 exhibitors from over 20 countries are participating in the exhibition.

Decision-makers from not only the Kurdistan Region but also other parts of Iraq are expected to visit the exhibition to meet the national and international exhibitors.

Minister Falah Mustafa Bakir, the Kurdistan Regional Government's Head of Foreign Relations, said, "Erbil International Fair has gone from strength to strength and shows that Erbil is a hub for Iraq's economy. We are delighted that many international exhibitors are participating. The Kurdistan Region is open to foreign trade and investment to ensure our economic progress and prosperity."

The Erbil International Fair has established a solid track record. Thanks to Kurdistan's good security and stability, the fair is able to attract many international exhibitors and visitors from all parts of Iraq. Last year's fair attracted 75,000 visitors, one third professional visitors and two thirds the general public.

Several government and commercial organizations are supporting their countries' presence at the fair, such as the Turkish Undersecretariat of Foreign Trade, UK Trade and Investment, and France Agency for International Business Development, to name a few.

During the fair, which takes place from 24 to 27 October, several foreign delegations will visit the Kurdistan Region to look at the many opportunities for trade and investment.

KRG's Head of Foreign Relations to Congresswoman: US must support Iraq's federalism after troop withdrawal

Erbil, Kurdistan - (KRG.org) Iraq - Kurdistan Regional Government's Head of Foreign Relations on Thursday in Erbil met US Congresswoman Loretta Sanchez to discuss the impact of the forthcoming US troops withdrawal on the Kurdistan Region and on Iraq as a whole.

Minister Falah Mustafa Bakir said that after the troop withdrawal, the US should support federalism and decentralisation to ensure Iraq's democracy, economic prosperity and stability.

Congresswoman Sanchez briefed the minister about the reasons for her visit and her Iraq activities in the American Congress. She said, "The Kurdistan Region is a success story within Iraq and even with the US troops draw-down, the United States will remain a committed ally to Kurdistan."

Congresswoman Sanchez, who was accompanied by a delegation, has previously visited other parts of Iraq, but this was her first visit to the Kurdistan Region.

Minister Bakir highlighted that in addition to the implementation of Article 140 of Iraq's constitution on the disputed territories, the senior Kurdish leadership is concerned about many other unresolved issues. These issues include adherence to Iraq's constitution as well as its federal structure that has been enshrined in the constitution, partnership and democracy-building, the passage of a hydrocarbons law, a revenue-sharing law and other outstanding issues between Erbil and Baghdad.

The emphasis on the federal framework of Iraq is no longer just a Kurdish issue according to Minister Bakir, but is also in the interests of all Iraqis regardless of ethnicity, religion or sect. It will help pave the way for a genuine partnership between Iraq's political blocs, and will ensure the rule of law. Given the complex make-up of the Iraqi state, a federal structure far away from the centralised methods of governance of the past would be the only way to satisfy the needs of the different communities living within Iraq.

Minister Bakir and Congresswoman Sanchez exchanged views on the withdrawal of American troops from Iraq, and the possible scenarios that could unfold afterwards, Minister Bakir expressed his hope that the American government will remain active in supporting a federal, democratic and pluralistic Iraq in order to achieve economic prosperity, security and stability, not only in the Kurdistan Region but across Iraq. Minister Bakir thanked the Kurdish-American Congressional Caucus for their continued assistance and support to the people of the Kurdistan Region.

Prime Minister Salih meets US Vice President Biden at White House

Washington DC, USA (KRG.org) - With the debate about the U.S. troop presence in Iraq seemingly out of the way, the Prime Minister of the Kurdistan Region of Iraq Barham Salih urged the Vice President of the United States Joseph P. Biden to deploy the broad array of diplomatic and economic tools necessary to ensure that the stability and prosperity of the Kurdistan Region is preserved and built upon.

During a meeting at the White House, Prime Minister Salih and Vice President Biden discussed the impact of the forthcoming US military withdrawal from Iraq on the Kurdistan Region and on Iraq as a whole. In their discussion, Prime Minister Salih stressed the importance of increasing meaningful US engagement on all fronts – economic, cultural, political and security – “to create an enduring strategic relationship between the US and Iraq, including the Kurdistan Region.”

For his part, the Vice President reaffirmed the US commitment to a stable, federal and democratic Iraq and in an official statement released by the White House “praised the dynamism of Iraq’s Kurdish region and the historic friendship and partnership between the Kurdish and American people.”

Both sides stressed the importance of a strategic relationship between the US and Iraq and spoke optimistically about furthering the relationship as outlined in the strategic framework agreement signed between Iraq and the US in 2008.

The Prime Minister, accompanied by Iraq’s Ambassador to the United States Samir Sumaida’ie, the Kurdistan Regional Government’s (KRG) Minister of Planning Ali Sindi and the KRG Representative to the US Qubad Talabani, also discussed the importance of promoting increased US private sector involvement in the Kurdistan Region. Citing Kurdistan as a Region ripe for investment with a consistently growing economy, the Prime Minister assured the Vice President, “Kurds welcome American businesses to operate in Kurdistan; not just to benefit from the inviting market in Kurdistan, but to also be well positioned to branch out throughout the country as opportunities arise.”

Exxon signs Kurd exploration contracts

By Sylvia Pfeifer, Energy Editor

ExxonMobil has become the first of the "super-major" oil companies to venture into Kurdistan, in a controversial move that will be seen as a huge vote of confidence in the semi-autonomous region of Iraq but could spark a backlash in Baghdad.

Exxon, the largest international oil company, signed contracts with the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) last month to explore for oil and gas in six blocks in the region, according to an adviser to the KRG.

"The KRG has for the last few months been in discussions with a number of major oil companies. This resulted in the recent signing by ExxonMobil of contracts to explore in six blocks," Michael Howard, an adviser to the KRG, told the Financial Times.

Iraq's central government has been informed of the agreements, said another person familiar with the situation. ExxonMobil declined to comment.

Independent oil and gas companies, including US players Marathon Oil and Hess, have flocked to Kurdistan in recent years, attracted by its relatively untapped hydrocarbon wealth – the region is estimated to hold 45bn barrels of oil and between 100,000bn-200,000bn cubic feet of gas. Tony Hayward, the former chief executive of BP, recently emerged at the helm of Genel Energy, a Kurdistan-focused player.

Until now, however, the world's super-majors such as Exxon, BP and Royal Dutch Shell, have held back from signing contracts for fear of antagonizing Baghdad, which has said it believes the contracts are illegitimate.

ExxonMobil's surprise decision could prompt calls from some political factions for the company to lose its position in Iraq. The company led the first US consortium to re-enter Iraq's oil industry in more than 30 years in 2009 by agreeing to develop the giant West Qurna field. ExxonMobil is also building a multibillion-dollar water injection system that will be used by other foreign oil companies in different oil projects in southern Iraq. Oil companies inject water in the reservoirs to increase pressure and production rates.

However, people aware of the agreements said Exxon's decision to agree contracts with the KRG could prove to be a catalyst for the region. The decision to invest comes just weeks before an end-of- December deadline for the US to withdraw its troops from Iraq.

Expectations have been rising that a long-awaited hydrocarbons law – which would involve the sharing of revenues – could be finalized by year's end. Iraq's prime minister, Nouri al-Maliki, and the KRG's prime minister, Barham Salih, met in Baghdad last month and agreed to either amend a 2007 hydrocarbons law as agreed by all political factions or adopt the 2007 law as is, officials said at the time.

Exports from Kurdistan, which had been stymied amid the disagreement, have begun to flow, albeit slowly. At the moment, Kurdistan exports an average of 175,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day through Iraq's state oil marketing board. Under a landmark deal negotiated with Baghdad in February, Kurdistan currently receives half of all revenue from the oil it exports. The deal allows producing companies such as Genel Energy, China's Sinopec and Norway's DNO, to recoup their investment costs.

NPR interviews Prime Minister Salih in Washington

Audio of the interview is attached.

Transcript

ROBERT SIEGEL, host: In neighboring Iraq, U.S. troops are pulling out by the end of this year. And one question for Iraqis is: Will the delicate balance of their country's ethnic and religious groups survive the withdrawal of U.S. forces.

Well, Barham Salih is the prime minister of the Kurdistan Regional Government. It runs Iraq's three northern Kurdish provinces. Kurds are not Arabs. Most are Sunni Muslims. They account for as much as 20 percent of Iraq's population. And there are Kurdish minorities in Turkey, Iran and Syria, as well.

Prime Minister Salih, welcome back.

BARHAM SALIH: Thanks, Robert. Thank you for having me.

SIEGEL: U.S. forces have helped stabilize relations among Iraqis, Kurds and its Sunnis and Shiite Arabs. Who is going to assume that role when the U.S. is out?

SALIH: Well, the onus of responsibility will be on us even more. And the Iraqi political leadership will have to really shoulder this responsibility. And we need to do better and fill in any void left by the U.S. troops as they leave.

SIEGEL: We're talking about a few weeks from now. You have to do better. Are Iraqi forces up to the job?

SALIH: We are concerned, certainly about air force and the airspace, that Iraqi defenses could be vulnerable. I was in Baghdad a week ago. I met with colleagues in the Iraqi federal government and I think we want to still rely on assistance from the United States, use engagement. But at the same time, we have to recognize that the Iraqi political leadership will have to be up to the task.

SIEGEL: Oil raises a basic question of federalism versus centralism. There's oil in the north of Iraq, as well as elsewhere in the country. Do you still not have an understanding with the central government in Baghdad, as to whether the Kurdistan Regional Government controls what's under the ground?

SALIH: The constitution is clear. Undiscovered oil fields are a purview of the regional government. And that is why we went into developing our oil infrastructure. We have invited international companies to help us uncovered that vast potential in Kurdistan.

This is, I agree, is a subject of dispute with the federal government, or specifically with the ministry of oil in Baghdad. But we have agreed recently with Prime Minister Maliki that a draft law will be submitted to parliament by end of year because...

SIEGEL: In fairness, I've been asking you about this for years.

SALIH: Absolutely.

SIEGEL: And still - there's still no resolution for pretty basic question.

SALIH: But there is one fundamental fact that is important. We are producing oil and the oil is being pumped through the Iraqi pipeline. And the revenues are deposited in the Iraqi central treasury, and this is being redistributed for all of the people of Iraq. We need a legislation. We need a legal framework that will regulate this.

But at the end of the day, I believe that the - the era of centralized management of oil resources and statist policy is over.

SIEGEL: Prime Minister Barham Salih, I'd like you to try to explain something to Americans, as best as we can get it. The Kurdistan Regional Government enjoys some autonomy from the central government of Iraq in Baghdad. I want you to explain, what is it? Is it like Texas is to the United States? Is it like French-speaking Quebec to Canada? How do you describe the relationship you enjoy?

SALIH: Some people described us as like the Texans of Iraq. But I would say like the United States in general, you have a federal system of government. The relation between states and the federal government goes through different phases...

SIEGEL: But Texas that control armed people going across the border from Mexico. That's a national responsibility. Here, there's something more at work.

SALIH: No, absolutely. No, at the same time, Iraqis security capabilities are not developed enough in order to control the borders. It's like the United States in some ways. We are asserting statehood rights. The federal government has certain responsibilities delineated in the constitution. And we are trying to make sure that our self-government is respected.

And we are also trying, in Kurdistan, to lead the way for the rest of Iraq, by creating a more vibrant, more dynamic economy, more free-market based, and that way to attract investment and make Kurdistan a gateway to the rest of the Iraqi market.

SIEGEL: Is the U.S. leaving too soon?

SALIH: There was an intense debate inside Iraq. We in Kurdistan were hoping that there will be residual force staying behind. But other compatriots of ours in Baghdad saw it differently, and the Iraqi government and, for that matter, the U.S. administration, have come to the conclusion to honor the 2008 security pact between Iraq and the United States, by which the forces would be leaving by the end of this year.

I hope that this is the beginning of a new relationship of the United States with the new Iraq. And helping Iraq shore up its democratic foundations, I think, is important for the rest of the world.

SIEGEL: Are you concerned about a resurgence of inter-sectarian or inter-ethnic violence in Iraq with the U.S. leaving?

SALIH: I am. Living in Iraq, living in the Middle East, you always have to be concerned. And I say this is a challenge, the new environment in Iraq. But we have to be up to the challenge and we have to step up to that challenge. And I hope all of us understand the need for greater political unity and working together.

I'm not going to be merely idealistic and say things will be fine. I'm sure that we will be tested and this is the moment that we need to show leadership in the country.

SIEGEL: Well, Prime Minister Salih, thank you very much for talking with us once again.

SALIH: Thank you for having me

Subject: Alasania Appeals for Democratic Reform in Georgia

Dear Friend of Georgia:

Please take a moment to read the below opinion piece by a leader of Georgia's democratic opposition detailing the challenges to free and fair elections in the former Soviet republic next year. A strategically-vital ally of the United States, Georgia has previously demonstrated its ability to respect the will of its people and set an example for the authoritarian nations bordering it. As Mr. Alasania outlines below, the increasing repressions of its current government make a strong case for the country's friends to help set it back on track, restore balance and once again lead the way for the less democratic countries on its peripheries. Thank you for your thoughtful attention.

--Campaign for Georgia's Democratic Future

ALASANIA: Republic of Georgia desperate for reform

Rose Revolution wilts under anti-democratic crackdown

By Irakli Alasania
-The Washington Times
6:43 p.m., Friday, August 5, 2011

The Republic of Georgia in the Caucasus is on the cusp of change. Beyond street protests, there is a deep polarization in society that bespeaks an unrest that will not be stopped until the government changes and democratic reforms finally are introduced.

I know this government and its shortcomings firsthand. I served for two years as its ambassador to the United Nations. I resigned in late 2008 because I disagreed with the erratic, unilateral decision-making of President Mikheil Saakashvili and his government.

The government's inability to tolerate alternative views led my country into an armed conflict with Russia that we had no chance of winning. But wrongheaded decisions keep rolling on. Journalists are protesting the arrest of Mr. Saakashvili's official photographer on charges of espionage after he documented police brutality. This follows the killing of four protesters in late May.

The solution to these mindless crackdowns is twofold. First, there must be a better mechanism for political competition and the peaceful transfer of power. Without election reform of this kind, Mr. Saakashvili's authoritarianism will go unchecked. The Georgian people cannot live with that much longer.

Second, freedom of expression must be protected. In the modern world, people must be heard. Unfortunately, in Georgia, dissent is barely tolerated, if at all.

Georgians know democracy and freedom exist in Georgia in name only. They are disappointed and, in many ways, surprised, given the country's recent history. The world still remembers with awe the Rose Revolution of 2003, when former President Eduard Shevardnadze was swept from power over outrage against massive electoral fraud. Surely a more open society would be the inevitable result.

Not so. Too little has been done to fix Georgia's broken democracy in the ensuing eight years. The public still needs greater faith in official voter lists. The principle of one person, one vote is undermined by voter lists subject to manipulation and an unfair system that rewards the party in power with more seats than it wins at the polls. In addition, the government must be stopped from spending money freely to retain its stranglehold on power. In effect, the government corruptly buys its influence by using taxpayer resources for its own ends. This must stop.

Despite the efforts of my political party, the Free Democrats, and of five other opposition parties to advance meaningful reforms, the government has taken only a few reluctant steps in the right direction. More needs to be done. Much more.

The dark cloud of censorship must be removed from Georgia's media. The two highest-rated television stations with national reach run consistently pro-government news. A third, alternative news channel - Maestro - has not been granted a national broadcasting license. Cable companies are quietly discouraged from including this channel in their offerings. If the government were serious about media freedom, it would grant Maestro the ability to broadcast nationwide. It also would stop accusing journalists of being spies. An independent Russian journalist who visited Georgia recently drew the chilling parallel between the state of press freedom in Georgia today and the campaign by Vladimir Putin to silence Russia's press a decade ago.

These are not simple challenges, to be sure. But a difficult journey begins with a few honest initiatives. Georgia is unique among former Soviet states because of the ingrained optimism of its people. Like Americans, we all say, "Yes, we can." But first we must speak frankly about what is wrong in Georgia today. Only then can we start working in earnest on the remedy.

Irakli Alasania, former U.N. ambassador for the Republic of Georgia, heads an opposition party, the Free Democrats.
